Ward features, facilities and localities:

ABOUT THE WARD

The settlement of Llansamlet dates back to the 1700s. By the mid-19th Century, collieries in Llansamlet were exporting 70,000 tons of coal a year. This was followed by numerous copper and zinc smelting plants, which survived well into the 20th Century. The nature and intensity of industrial development in Llansamlet left behind a heavily polluted landscape.

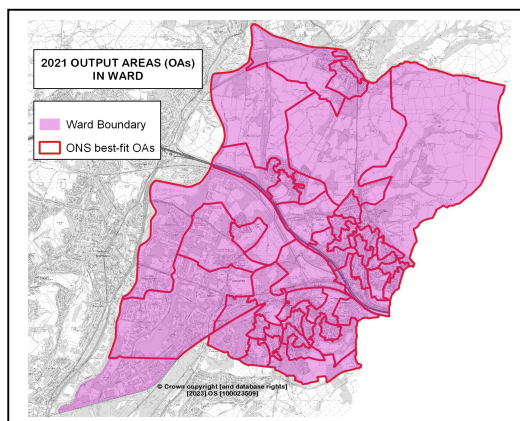

Llansamlet ward encompasses the mainly commercial localities of Enterprise Park (designated 1981) and Swansea Vale in the west and south areas of the ward, plus the densely populated Trallwn, Llansamlet and Tal-y-Copa communities in the south-east part and the more rural Birchgrove and Glais to the east and north respectively.

Worker houses in these localities were largely replaced by post-war semi-detached housing, including a large Council estate in Trallwn. Much of Birchgrove's housing was built post-war, in estates of mostly semi-detached houses, with areas also developed throughout the 1990s and more recently. Glais is characterised by lower density, generally detached houses.
